First and foremost I'd like to thank the people of Bernalillo for sharing a small portion of their lives with me. I wish to express my deepest gratitude to Lala Acosta, Charles Aguilar, Ralph Chavez, Tina Dominguez, Mike Kloepfel, Martha Liebert, Desiree Lovato, Timothy Lucero, Santiago Montoya, Shirley Pino, Leonard and Diana Prairie, Maria Rinaldi, Father Bill Sanchez, Robb A. Sisneros, Claude Stephenson, Eddie Torres II, Emma Torres, Sharon Torres-Garcia and countless individuals who shared their love and interest in the Matachines with me.

I am also grateful for those whom I hold dear to my heart for the long hours that they sat and listened to the issues I had surrounding this work. My friends, both in Colorado and New Mexico, were an integral part of this project. They logged many hours listening and asking questions about this project. Many of them received phone calls in the early morning hours with me explaining a new paragraph or page that I needed to share with someone. Special thanks to Amber Mora, Leonard Prairie Jr, Louie Duran, Angela Garcia-Buenaventa and Joseph Chavez for helping me during the editing process. My mother and father certainly merit mention for not only offering support during this work, but during my entire life. They have worked very hard to raise me and give the love and support that anyone undertaking their college career needs. They have shaped and molded me into the person that I am today, and my only wish thus far, is to make them happy and proud of my accomplishments. I am hopeful that I have achieved this goal. From the bottom of my heart, I'd like to thank my mom and dad for everything that they have given me. I'd also like to thank my extended families—the Mirabals and the Morenos for their support and guidance throughout my college years. Every family member has also shaped and molded me into the person that I am today. I am certainly grateful for their love and support. Also, I am indebted to my cousin Patrick Aguilar for sharing his interest in photography with me. By sharing his photos taken during las fiestas, this work became much more rounded and refined, thanks Pat.

I'd like to thank my advisors for their aid, guidance and support during the time that I have undertaken this project. I am indebted to Victoria Levine for her support as my academic advisor. With her guidance, I was able to turn my interest in Southwest Studies into a passion. To Mario Montaña, I owe my deepest gratitude and respect for helping me during the most difficult times of writing the initial thesis. Mario attended the 2004 Matachines in Bernalillo and photographed the event. Through his camera lens I was able to realize the love I have for Bernalillo and the culture it continues to practice. I would also like to thank Anne Hyde for her help in the long and tedious editing process. When I was in need of a second reader of my thesis in mid-February 2005, she was kind enough to fill this role. Through her intuition while editing my thesis, I was able to ask myself important questions regarding the identity of my people, as well as my own identity. This project was made possible through the Southwest Studies Benezet Grant and the Student/Faculty Collaborative Grant. I'd like to thank Victor Nelson-Cisneros for his support during my years at Colorado College. Thanks to Enrique Lamadrid and Miguel Gandert for your help and support. I hope to someday add to the legacy of documenting our culture that the two of you have so passionately and carefully described.

I also wish to commend and thank every person who has ever been involved in the Matachines- in the past, currently, and in the future for their involvement in this tradition. It is refreshing to know that these individuals have and will serve in the survival of our beloved tradition so that in 2010, we happily celebrate the 317th annual Fiesta de San Lorenzo. Que viva la fiesta!
